

Calgary

Cal · gar · y, 'kæl·gə·ri, n. water crops without an Ocean, which the vernacular did not need to ship out Siksika on a plain galley, esp. when the Napikowann needed an island; or a word to evoke Scotland machair, which acts to ignore the tongues stripped after the palaver Cal · gar · i · an n. see Napikowann

Ako-katssinn

Ak · o - kats · sinn, æk·oʊ·kāts·sɪn, n. prior to an 1875 isle, which in unplanned style grew, so today from Crestmont to Bridlewood sleep seeds in concrete as your neighbor blossoms aloof behind his white picket fence. Oki becomes lost in the suburb. Called out on the lamppost resplendent _____ close, doors bolt. Where are the Niitsitapi?

K Y E K O C H E R

KYE KOCHER is in his final year of an English degree at the University of Calgary, where he is working on an Honours thesis in creative writing entitled Transposition of the Great Analogies. "Calgary" and "Ako-katssinn" are definitions of his home of the last five years, full of frustration.

TO SUBMIT YOUR POEM FOR THE SPRING 2011 COMPETITION, OR FOR INFORMATION:
maboyd@ucalgary.ca | www.ucalgary.ca/poemoftheseason/

UNIVERSITY OF CALGARY POEM
of the season

Sixth Edition Autumn 2010

Sponsored by the Department of English, Libraries & Cultural Resources and the Creative Writing Research Group